

My company owns and manages several long term care facilities for older adults.

We want to offer the best quality of life we can so we employ occupational therapists who:

- Plan individualized programs based on personal interests and abilities.
- Work with our care staff to ensure that they understand how best to support our residents.
- Ensure that individual residents are as independent and active as possible.

We feel sure that the residents who engage in meaningful occupation on a daily basis are happier and healthier and, as a result, require less attendant care.

Because of occupational therapy, our residents are more independent.
